The Weekly Plan is not a decorative dashboard. It is the execution layer that sits on top of the cycle engine and keeps live score against blind recurring buying.

This is the proof layer many buyers miss. The product is not just a historical ledger of bottoms and tops. It also shows whether the current deployed plan is earning its extra complexity right now.

1. How the engine and the Weekly Plan fit together

Layer	What it does	What the buyer can inspect
Cycle engine	Identifies confirmed bottom, top, and risk states on the canonical host.	Labels, alert families, event coverage, forward outcomes, and same-window model studies.
Weekly Plan	Turns that state into recurring buys, reserve build, staged trims, and cash posture by mode.	On-chart plan rows, mode behavior, Safety presets, and exact weekly amount messaging.
Continuity	Keeps the sleeve honest once live capital and existing holdings enter the picture.	Weekly Strategy Tracker, capital ledger, and live results view.
Benchmark	Compares live deployed behavior against a simple weekly auto-buy path.	Strategy XRP-eq, Auto-buy XRP-eq, Lead versus auto-buy, and Extra XRP.

2. Why this matters commercially

- It closes the gap between a strong historical story and a live operating edge.
- It lets the buyer judge whether the plan is adding value instead of adding noise.
- It makes the product legible to existing holders, recurring-budget buyers, and BTC-first operators who want a measurable sleeve rather than a thrill ride.

3. What the buyer should verify first

Check that the plan is running on BITSTAMP:XRPUSD at 1W, that the intended mode and recurring budget are set correctly, that the Safety preset you chose is the one you actually want, and that the Weekly Strategy Tracker matches the real sleeve state. Then watch the proof block: Strategy XRP-eq, Auto-buy XRP-eq, Lead versus auto-buy, and Extra XRP.

The Weekly Plan is where the cycle engine becomes money management. That is why it belongs in the buy decision, not just in the "after purchase" conversation.

The shortest fair description is this: the Weekly Plan is the live execution and accountability layer of the XRP edge.
